Down on the Famous FARM

These photos are those that you didn't need to "delete" from the 2004 photo album. They were taken in 2004, but they were intended to "live" in the album. They were taken in 2004, but they were intended to "live" in the album. They were taken in 2004, but they were intended to "live" in the album.

Grant's Farm 2004

Farm life can bring new perspective to daily life—and scrapbooking. In this layout, I've used multiple photo angles to capture the event, from the adorable overhead portrait to the cropped shot of the girl's feet and a side shot that shows the child's interaction with the farm animals.

Photos by Steve Bohan. Supplies featured include: 63 Memories, Rubber Stamp, Forwards, Scrapling ink, Bladder, Tackles, Rub-on, and dimensional letters: Making Memories, Black Leaf Art Treasures, Clavon K&K Company, Digi Typing, Copalate, Avid, ZenType Ink 80, downloaded from the internet.

Sugarbush Farm

Farm life is all about using land efficiently. Christine copies the same principle to the space on her layout. "I like to include lots of photos on a page," she says, "so to maximize space I sometimes add captions directly to my photos with photo-editing software."

Christine also scanned her patterned paper and added her title and journaling to it with the software, allowing her to use white text that complements the snow in her photos.
